Read the following conversation and answer question 1 and 2 in the light of your understanding with the given scenario.

The community service and outreach committee of Students in Communication was meeting to determine what cause should benefit from their annual fund-raising talent contest.

"So," said Mark, "does anyone have any ideas about whose cause we should sponsor?"

"Well," replied Glenna, "I think we should give it to a group that's doing literacy work."

"Sounds good to me," replied Mark.

"My aunt works at the Boardman Center as the literacy coordinator, so why don't we just adopt them?" asked Glenna.

"Gee, I don't know much about the group," said Reed.

— "Come on, you know, they help people learn how to read," replied Glenna sarcastically.

"Well, I was kind of hoping we'd take a look at sponsoring the local teen runaway center," offered Angelo.

"Listen, if your aunt works at the Boardman Center," commented Leticia, "let's go with it."

"Right," said Pablo, "that's good enough for me."

"Yeah," replied Heather, "let's do it and get out of here."

"I hear what you're saying, Heather," Mark responded, "I've got plenty of other stuff to do."

"No disrespect meant to Glenna, but wasn't the Boardman Center in the news because of questionable use of funds?" countered Angelo.

"Do we really know enough about them?"

"OK," said Mark, "enough discussion. I've got to get to class. All in favor of the literacy program at the Boardman Center indicate by saying aye. I think we've got a majority. Sorry, Angelo—you can't win them all."

"I wish all meetings went this smoothly," Heather said to Glenna as they left the room. "I mean, that was really a good meeting."

Q1. What did the group really know about the Boardman Center? Is it good group discussion practice to rely on a passing comment of one member? Support your answer with at least two solid arguments. (5) [CLO 4]

The group knew that Boardman Centre is an organization that helps people learn how to read. Glenna's aunt work there as the literary coordinator. In a group discussion, every member should participate equally, and if a group member passes a comment that is supported by facts, we should listen to him and investigate.

PEL Communications employs circa 5000 employees worldwide and are a world class provider of integrated communications solutions to professional, civil and military customers for the protection of communities and critical national infrastructure. PEL's recruitment is such that they look for people passionate about topics related to electronic engineering, telecommunications and security.

Recruitment Centre had been working with PEL since 2006: With no core behaviours being used to measure candidates against for recruitment or retention purposes, the PEL interview process focused mainly on technical competencies with very little or no emphasis on behavioural or motivational fit. This resulted in unsuitable candidates being selected, different selection processes being used by various hiring managers or candidates withdrawing from the process.

Recruitment Centre proposal was to provide on-site competency based interview training for their primary Hiring Managers. The interactive workshop demonstrated how to structure an interview using both technical and behavioural questions, crucial recruitment/selection legislation and how to use competencies for assessment and development purposes.

→ Write four probable benefits can be brought about by the provided solution of Recruitment Centre regarding on-site competency based interview training.

1. Emphasis on non-technical ~~skills~~, behaviour and motivational skills- ~~of person~~. 1.5

2. Deserving and competing persons will be selected ~~out~~ ~~of~~ ~~uns~~ and unsuitable candidates will be rejected. 1.5

3. Fair selection; Managers with good leadership skills will be selected by judging their temperament and problem dealing skills. 1.5

4. Development ~~and~~ ^{is} ~~made~~ increased when candidates will be selected on their ~~and~~ ^{and} assessed properly. 1.5

Q2. Read the given extracts, identify which fallacy does each extract represent and give explanation to support your answer: (12)

- a) My father smoked four packs of cigarettes a day since age fourteen and lived until age sixty-nine.
Therefore, smoking really can't be that bad for you.

Fallacy: Hasty Generalization ✓
Explanation: The speaker is providing no strong evidence that denies the dangerousness of smoking a cigarette. There are exceptional cases. 3

- b) Since hair always precedes the growth of teeth in babies, the growth of hair causes the growth of teeth.

Fallacy: False cause ✓
Explanation: There is no fact and research about the statement "Hair causes the growth of teeth". There are many bald people who have teeth in this world. 3

- c) Tayyab: Biological evolution is both a theory and a fact.

Mahnoor: That is ridiculous! How can you possibly be absolutely certain that we evolved from pond scum!

Tayyab: Actually, that is a gross misrepresentation of my assertion. I never claimed we evolved from pond scum. Unlike math and logic, science is based on empirical evidence and, therefore, a scientific fact is something that is confirmed to such a degree that it would be perverse to withhold provisional consent. The empirical evidence for the fact that biological evolution does occur falls into this category.

Fallacy: Straw person ✓
Explanation: Mahnoor didn't understand what Tayyab wanted to explain and started arguing while after interpreting him wrong. 3

- d) Salesman: This car gets better than average gas mileage and is one of the most reliable cars according to Consumer Reports.

Yaseen: I doubt it—you obviously just want to sell me that car.

Fallacy: ~~Straw person~~ Hasty Generalization X
Explanation: ~~Salesman~~ Salesman is giving no strong evidence to support his argument.

Q1. Read the given abstract on ethics and globalization and answer the questions below:

(10 marks) [CLO 1]

Abstract

Tolerance – respecting those who are different – is arguably of particular importance in an era of globalization, where a potential for economic, social and personal development is increasingly a function of interaction with others different from oneself. We investigate whether globalization induces parents to want to instill tolerance in their children, the main idea being that this quality would equip children for greater success in a more integrated world. Using a survey measure, we indeed find that globalization enhances the willingness to transmit such social values. More precisely, economic and social, but not to the same extent political, globalization has this effect, as shown by using the KOF Index of Globalization in regression analysis of up to 59 countries. Extreme bounds analysis and outlier tests indicate robustness. Overall, our results suggest that certain kinds of globalization seem able to shape values in ways considered desirable by many.

1. “Tolerant people possibly flourish more in a globalized world?” Do you agree or disagree? Write four reasons to support your answer. (4)
2. How can parents contribute to inculcate globalized vision among their children? Write three strong suggestions. (3)
3. According to your own opinion, does globalization shape social values or vice versa? Support your answer with two valid reasons. (3)

Q2. An agenda is an organized outline of the information and decision items that will be covered during a meeting. Imagine that along with the Chief Engineer, there is a two member foreign delegation that is going to visit your factory next week. In particular, they are interested to visit your design and automation section. As Shift In-charge Engineer, you are going to chair a meeting with your team tomorrow afternoon 3:00 pm.

- a. Write a five point meeting agenda to prepare your team for the upcoming visit.
- b. Write five points to guide one of your team members to make a 15 minute power point presentation for the visitors.
