

An Indian Father's Plea

By Robert G. Lake-Thom

Group Members:-

Owais Rao 22L-7638

Asad Mehmood 22L-6270

Agha Abdul Wahab 22L-7729

Talha Amir 22L-6275

اسلام علیکم

Today, we are going to present the critical analysis of the article "An Indian Father's Plea" which is a letter from a father to a teacher as a reaction to his son being called a slow-learner at school.

Robert G. Lake-Thom, also known as Medicine Grizzly Bear, is a traditional Native American healer and spiritual teacher. He is the author of multiple books on Native American shamanic life and ceremonies.

In this article, he explains how culture is affecting one's views about others and the world. Further, he puts emphasis on the fact that it takes time to adjust to a new cultural system and learn new things..

The tone of the author is serious. Because he wants the teacher to treat his son like he treats the other students. The pattern of organization of the article is argumentative. Because Wind-Wolf comes from a different culture. The teacher should treat him fairly and with respect. The purpose of the author is persuasive. Because the writer is convincing the teacher that Wind-Wolf is not culturally "disadvantaged", but he is culturally "different". The style of the author is formal. This passage expresses the emotions and feelings of the writer and conveys them to the reader.

The negative point is that Wind-Wolf is being racially discriminated. At school, he's been declared a slow-learner while outside, he is not allowed to play with his white friends because he is Indian.

The positive point is that Indian children have a constitutional right to learn, retain and maintain their heritage and culture. Moreover, non-Indian children also have a constitutional right to learn about Native American heritage and culture.

The writer remained relevant to the topic and presented his stance..

To summarize this analysis, it is a good read as it highlights the importance of equal education. It puts an emphasis on the racism in Western education system. In my opinion, it is quite convincing that adapting to an entirely new environment takes time and is sometimes difficult for children.

Thank You!